

Data Protection Law: Workshop for Pakistani Suppliers Selling into the Middle East or Europe

- Pakistani tech and service companies provide great products but sometimes struggle to sell into the Middle East because of data protection compliance.
- This workshop is focused on teaching suppliers in Pakistan how to prove PDPL compliance in KSA and the UAE to companies that might want to use their services. It is also highly relevant to those wanting to supply into Europe as the GDPR has a 90% overlap with the PDPL.
- It shows you the law, the expectations that Middle Eastern companies have and step by step guidance on how to fulfil them.
- You will come away understanding what to do, armed with templates and a plan to ensure that you a lack of compliance does not hold back your penetration of these important and lucrative markets.
- SDAIA, the regulator in KSA, just announced it has fined 48 companies over data protection breaches

Why you Should Attend

It is not enough to have an amazing tech product or service to sell into the Middle East or Europe – you need to prove compliance in the area of data protection.

This workshop will give your company a competitive edge by:

- Helping you understand compliance requirements
- Going through a whole cycle of due diligence as one of your potential customers might perform on you
- Enabling you understand how to score highly on such due diligence by giving you plans, procedures and insights into how to prove compliance
- Enabling you to show off your compliance to gain that competitive advantage

This will be a combination of interactive lectures, exercises and quizzes. We will also issue you with a complete compliance pack that you can tailor to your needs.

Who Should Attend

Designed for those that are leading on bidding for work in the Middle East or Europe and those that deliver tech or compliance internally:

- CISOs, CIOs, CTOs, and IT Directors
- Data Governance & Data Management Leads
- Risk & Compliance Managers
- Business Leaders
